We view Donald Trump's ascendancy to the Presidency of the U.S. as confirmation of a political and economic paradigm shift that started with Brexit but is likely to continue for the foreseeable future, including elections across Europe in 2017. Consistent with this view, we believe that there are four major potentially secular changes that all investment professionals must consider: fiscal ...

The economics of global warming concerns the economic aspects of global warming; this can inform policies that governments might consider in response. A number of factors make this a difficult problem from both economic and political perspectives: it is a long-term, intergenerational problem; benefits and costs are distributed unequally both within and across countries; and scientific and ...

In the centenary year of the 1918 influenza pandemic, the first question to an influenza virologist has to be the obvious one: could it happen again? Wendy Barclay, Professor of Influenza Virology in the Faculty of Medicine at the UK's Imperial College London, believes it could. Or, more precisely, that there is no reason why a viral genetic recombination event shouldn't allow it to start.
