Gas chromatography–mass spectrometry (GC-MS) is an analytical method that combines the features of gas-chromatography and mass spectrometry to identify different substances within a test sample. Applications of GC-MS include drug detection, fire investigation, environmental analysis, explosives investigation, and identification of unknown samples, including that of material samples obtained ...

If the above looks too complex, do not worry. In reality it all boils down to just four combinations highlighted in the table above. The rest are either deprecated, not supported or just impractical to apply in real world. So, in the following chapters we cover the working principles of the following combinations:

Having this information allows us to say that this particular piece of software had the allocation rate of 161 MB/sec during the period of measurement.. Why Should I Care? After measuring the allocation rate we can understand how the changes in allocation rate affect application throughput by increasing or reducing the frequency of GC pauses.

Gaschromatographie mit Massenspektrometrie-Kopplung ist die Kopplung eines Gas-Chromatographen (GC) mit einem Massenspektrometer (MS). Das Gesamtverfahren bzw. die GerÄtekoppelung wird verkÄrztend auch als GC-MS, GC/MS oder GCMS bezeichnet, im Falle der Tandem-Massenspektrometrie GC-MS/MS oder Ähnlich.

Liquid chromatographyâ€mass spectrometry (LC-MS) is an analytical chemistry technique that combines the physical separation capabilities of liquid chromatography (or HPLC) with the mass analysis capabilities of mass spectrometry (MS). Coupled chromatography - MS systems are popular in chemical analysis because the individual capabilities of each technique are enhanced synergistically.
